

CLINICAL ASSISTANT PROFESSOR

Department of Psychology

ARTS AND SCIENCE

The Department of Psychology at New York University seeks a Clinical Assistant Professor to teach and advise students in our MA program in General Psychology. This full-time, three-year (renewable) non-tenured teaching position will begin September 1, 2008, pending administrative and budgetary approval. The successful candidate will teach a total of five courses during the academic year, including Research Methods (this total may include one or two undergraduate courses, as needed by the department), supervise the writing of MA theses, and help to prepare students for admission to doctoral programs. Candidates with doctoral degrees in psychology are preferred, as are those whose interests and teaching experience fall broadly in the area of social and/or quantitative psychology.

Please send a current CV, cover letter, and three letters of reference by April 30, 2008, to: Barry H. Cohen, Ph.D., Director, M.A. Program in Psychology, New York University, 6 Washington Place, New York, N.Y. 10003.

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY

NYU is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer.